Standards that were met with areas for improvement

Standard 1.2

- The pharmacy has systems to learn from mistakes that happen during the dispensing process. But it doesn't always keep a record about these or review these for patterns or trends. This means it could be missing opportunities to improve its ways of working.

Standard 1.6

- The pharmacy generally keeps all the records it needs to. But it doesn't always record the checks it makes about its stock of some higher-risk medicines, or audit all of these periodically. This could mean stock discrepancies aren't detected promptly and could make investigating potential issues more difficult.

Standard 4.2

- The pharmacy team members understand the checks they should make when supplying higher-risk medicines. And they are aware that some prescriptions are only valid for 28 days. But prescriptions are not always highlighted to help the team to identify these types of medicines easily. This could increase the chances that team members don't spot that a prescription is no longer valid or that additional checks should be made when the prescription is handed out.
