Standards that were met with areas for improvement

Standard 1.6

- The pharmacy largely keeps the records it needs to by law. It records the name of the supplier in its controlled drugs register, but its team doesn't routinely record the supplier's address. The pharmacy doesn't always keep accurate records of who has prescribed some of the medicines it dispenses on private prescriptions. This means it could be more difficult to establish where a prescription came from.

Standard 4.3

- Some medicines are removed from their manufacturer's original packaging and put into containers which aren't labelled properly. This could be problematic in the event of a drug safety alert or recall.
- The pharmacy generally stores its medicines securely. But a lockable roller shutter is missing from one of its over-the-counter (OTC) medicine display units. This means the pharmacy team has to remove a few OTC medicines if the pharmacy cannot open.
