Standards that were met with areas for improvement

Standard 4.3

- Medicines that required cold-chain storage were kept in a fridge in the dispensary. Whilst temperature records demonstrated that the fridge was within the required temperature range, readings had only been recorded on average two or three times a week over the last four weeks, rather than daily as expected. In addition, the fridge had reached capacity, and the magnetic closure of the current fridge did not work properly so it was kept closed with a weight. An additional fridge was already on order, but these factors could compromise the appropriate storage of temperature sensitive medicines.
