Areas of good practice

Standard 4.2

- The pharmacy team routinely provides counselling to patients who take high-risk medicines, and it has an electronic mechanism that flags the need to record this counselling at the point the medicine is provided to the patient. This is useful information in the event of a query or concern, to help provide continuity of care.

Standards that were met with areas for improvement

Standard 1.6

- The pharmacy largely maintains the records it is required to. However, some private prescription records contain incorrect or generic prescriber information. This reduces assurance that the pharmacy's records are complete and accurate when needed to support queries or concerns.

Principle 1: The governance arrangements safeguard the health, safety and wellbeing of patients and the public
