Standards that were met with areas for improvement

Standard 1.2

- The pharmacy team keeps a log of the dispensing mistakes it makes. But it doesn't always review this to spot patterns or trends. This means team members may sometimes miss opportunities to learn from their mistakes.

Standard 1.6

- The pharmacy generally maintains appropriate records as required by law. However, its emergency supply records are sometimes incomplete. And some prescriber details are missing or incorrectly recorded in the private prescription register. This could make it harder for the pharmacy to demonstrate the reliability of its records when responding to a query.

Standard 4.2

- The pharmacy doesn't keep a signed record as its written procedures requires its team to do when delivering people's medicines. This could be problematic when it needs to show it has delivered the right medicine to the right person.

Standard 4.3

- The pharmacy generally manages its medicines appropriately. However, some open boxes contain medicines from different batches or manufacturers, or medicines that are no longer in their original blister packaging. This makes it harder for the pharmacy to respond to safety alerts and check expiry dates accurately.
- The pharmacy has two working refrigerators and uses them to store medicines that require refrigeration at the correct temperature. However, the pharmacy team doesn't always monitor the temperature range of each refrigerator correctly. As a result, they may not identify temperature fluctuations or equipment failures promptly. This increases the risk of supplying medicines that may no longer be suitable for use.
