Standards not met

Standard 1.1

• The pharmacy has risk assessments in place for the services it provides. But it does not always assess the risks when working with other healthcare practitioners providing weight loss services.

For example, prescriptions for weight loss medicines are routinely dispensed to nurses who are not registered with the Care Quality Commission (CQC). This means the supply of some medicines may bypass the UK's healthcare regulatory framework if all the risks have not been identified and managed appropriately.

Standards that were met with areas for improvement

Standard 1.2

- The pharmacy records its near miss errors, but it does not routinely review them in a timely manner. This means there may be a delay in implementing improvements to help reduce the risk of similar incidents happening again.
- The pharmacy reviews when a dispensing error has occurred and makes a note of the incident. But it does not have a dispensing error template form to ensure all the important information has been recorded and reviewed to identify improvements and to help the pharmacy team members respond to any subsequent queries.

Standard 4.2

• The pharmacy sometimes dispenses medicines against prescriptions with ambiguous directions such as 'as directed'. This makes it difficult for the pharmacist to clinically review the prescription to ensure the medicine and quantity is appropriate for the aesthetic technique being provided.
