Standards not met

Standard 1.1

- The pharmacy does not adequately identify or manage the risks associated with its services, particularly those delivered at a distance. It has not carried out any risk assessments for the prescribing service for which it supplies medicines. This includes higher-risk treatments such as weight-loss medicines and antibiotics, which patients can access through the pharmacy's website. There are no prescribing guidelines or clinical protocols in place to support safe and consistent decision-making for some of the medicines supplied. As a result, the pharmacy cannot demonstrate that it has considered the specific risks linked to remote prescribing, the appropriateness of treatments supplied, or the safeguards required to protect patients.

Standard 1.2

- The pharmacy does not effectively audit the safety of the services it provides to people, particularly the prescribing service it operates and dispenses medicines for.

Standard 4.2

- The pharmacy relies heavily on people completing questionnaires without undertaking any independent verification check of their medical history, meaning prescribers make clinical decisions without confirming the accuracy or completeness of the information provided. This creates a significant risk that medicines may be supplied inappropriately or unsafely. The pharmacy also fails to demonstrate that it has effective systems to identify when a condition is not suitable for remote treatment. Some conditions offered through the service require physical examination, diagnostic testing, or in person assessment to ensure safe prescribing.
